About

80% of survivors of sex trafficking are at risk for re-exploitation.
We are fighting to prevent re-exploitation through Employment and Education.

Most people don't realize that sex trafficking is a cycle and 80% of survivors are at risk of re-exploitation due to points of vulnerability. These may include dysfunctional families, lack of skills, poverty or addictions. The healing journey is not linear, but by providing employment and resources for education, we can make a difference, one life at a time.

When you donate a designer purse, our incredible survivors are employed to sell that purse on our e-commerce purse shop. Once it's sold, the revenue is then reinvested to create more jobs and educational opportunities for other survivors.

Founder's Story

I am a wife, a mother of four, and the Founder & CEO of One Purse.

In 2011, I stepped away from my 15+ year career in the finance industry. I felt a burden for vulnerable women and children so strong that I was compelled to take action. At that time, I had no idea how widespread the issue of sex trafficking is or how deep the wounds of trauma are in the lives of its victims. As we began serving many different populations of vulnerable women and children, a pattern emerged. We identified an underserved and unique place of need among survivors of trafficking. They were being re-exploited because of their vulnerabilities and did not have the skills to create financial independence.

Today at One Purse, we empower survivors through employment in our unique social enterprise and education through scholarships for vocational training or tuition.

Together, we can prevent re-exploitation and provide a hope-filled future. With your partnership, survivors of trafficking are given the opportunity to build a healthy and sustainable life.
